

Global Goals: What next?

The implications of the new Global Goals for Sustainable Development

Please join us at a panel discussion on Friday 23 October from 9am-11am at gallery@oxo, South Bank, London

World leaders have agreed 17 new Global Goals for Sustainable Development that will drive efforts to end poverty over the next 15 years. But what will this mean in practice?

To mark CARE International's 70th anniversary, we're holding a panel discussion to explore what the implications of the new Global Goals for Sustainable Development are for aid in the future. What will a CARE package look like post 2015? How will the Global Goals be implemented by aid actors? – whether this be civil society, governments, donors, NGOs, academia, or private sector actors.

Please join us to participate in a discussion with a panel of four speakers:

- David Hallam, Director for International Finance and former Director UK Envoy Post-2015 Goals, DFID
- Nelson Muffuh, Head of Outreach and Stakeholder Engagement, Post-2015 Development Planning Unit, UN
- Serena Brown, Senior Manager, Global Development Initiative, KPMG
- Gaia Gozzo, Head of Governance, CARE International UK

The session will be facilitated by Eliza Anyangwe, freelance writer and commissioning editor for the Guardian.

Date: Friday 23 October, 9am-11am
